Primary & Secondary Territory Responsibilities

Primary Representative

The Primary Representative is the designated sales owner for the assigned zone. All company-generated opportunities originating within that zone—including inbound leads, NexCort iQ intelligence leads, RFP/RFI opportunities, referrals, website inquiries, partnerships, and other company-sourced prospects—are routed to the Primary Representative.

The Primary is responsible for timely outreach, CRM management, relationship development, demonstrations, proposals, follow-up, negotiations, and progressing the opportunity through close. The Primary also receives first consideration for conferences, trade shows, association meetings, and other sales events occurring within the assigned territory. NexCort iQ may assign other representatives to an event based on vertical expertise, availability, customer relationships, cost, or company needs.

Secondary Representative

The Secondary Representative is the designated backup and support representative for the zone. Being designated Secondary does not create automatic ownership of opportunities or entitlement to commission within that territory.

The Secondary may assist with prospecting, demonstrations, meetings, follow-up, conferences, proposal development, or account coverage when requested by the Primary or assigned by NexCort iQ. If the Primary is unavailable, fails to pursue an opportunity within the company's required timeframe, has a conflict, or the company determines reassignment is appropriate, the Secondary will normally receive first consideration to assume the opportunity.

Commission Ownership & Sharing

The representative assigned as the opportunity owner in the CRM is considered the Primary salesperson for commission purposes. A Secondary Representative does not automatically receive a commission split simply because an opportunity occurs within a zone where they are listed as Secondary.

When a Secondary or another representative provides material sales assistance that contributes to closing an opportunity, NexCort iQ may approve a commission split. Material assistance may include originating the relationship, securing the meeting, conducting substantial discovery or demonstrations, managing significant portions of the sales cycle, participating in negotiations, or otherwise making a meaningful contribution to the close.

Any commission split must be documented and approved by NexCort iQ before the opportunity closes. The approved split applies to the commission earned on that opportunity; it does not change the underlying territory assignment.

Independent Sales Contractor Zones

For example, if a deal generates a $10,000 sales commission and an approved commission allocation is 75% Primary / 25% Secondary, the Primary receives $7,500, and the Secondary receives $2,500.

Routine assistance—such as attending one meeting, answering a question, making an introduction without further involvement, or providing occasional support—does not automatically require a commission split.

Self-Generated Opportunities

Representatives are encouraged to prospect and build relationships regardless of geography. A representative who independently develops an opportunity through personal prospecting, an existing relationship, networking, or another legitimate source should register the opportunity in the CRM immediately.

NexCort iQ will determine ownership based on the existing relationship, territory, previous CRM activity, source of the opportunity, and the company's best interests.

A territory assignment should not be used to take an established, documented opportunity away from the representative who created and developed it. When both the originating representative and territory Primary have meaningful roles, NexCort iQ may establish an appropriate commission split.

Conferences & Event Leads

Conference attendance does not automatically establish ownership of every lead generated at the event. Leads should generally be routed according to the prospect's geographic territory. For example, if representatives attend a national conference together and meet agencies from several states, route those opportunities to the respective territory Primaries.

However, when a representative develops a substantive relationship at the conference and continues to play a meaningful role in the resulting sales process, NexCort iQ may establish a commission-sharing arrangement between that representative and the territory Primary.

To Sum it Up:

Primary = territory owner and first recipient of company-generated opportunities.

Secondary = designated backup/support and first option for coverage.

Commission sharing = based on meaningful contribution, not simply the Primary/Secondary designation, and must be approved by NexCort iQ.
